Improving emotional health and well being

Are they too young? Talking with infants and preschoolers about bodies, relationships and sexuality

Christine Sturgeon, B.Ed., Child Development Supervisor (Level III)
Education Coordinator, Sexual and Reproductive Health
Alberta Health Services

The foundation for healthy adult relationships and sexuality is built in infancy and preschool aged children. Learn how you can help support the healthy sexual development in the children in your life by:

- Gaining understanding of the importance of talking about bodies, relationships and sexuality with very young children
- Discuss when and how to talk
- Develop comfort and confidence in using practical strategies and tools
